Bob Hope, from whom viewers are enjoying a summer vacation, would do well to spend his few months away from the cameras watching film recordings of his past season's shows. This suggestion is not designed as punishment—although he deserves it—but as a possible step toward improving his TV shows next fall.

In the course of becoming the Armed Forces' favorite performer (and perhaps no star has done more to entertain our military personnel throughout the world), Hope has developed a style of comedy suitable for stag audiences. He has brought this style, which involves pawing, or being pawed by, beautiful women, to television.

A joke that might amuse a man at a stag party may embarrass him if his wife and kids are also in the audience. And "embarrassing" sums up Hope's shows better than any other one word. Vulgar—yes. Crude—yes. In bad taste—most certainly. But chiefly embarrassing.

His last show of the season was a complete adventure in suggestiveness. In the first sketch, set in a university classroom, he was a "professor of love," teaching the nuances of parked-car bundling to Marilyn Maxwell. Miss Maxwell, who appears to have all the naivete of a Cleopatra, massaged Hope, kissed him frequently and lengthily, and wound up on his lap. In the last one he was pursued by Cass Daly, a fine comedienne when given half a chance, but ill at ease in Hope's stag skits. Zsa Zsa, the fun-loving Gabor, joined the chase and they struggled over him until Hope announced, "Porfirio told me there'd be days like this." Zsa Zsa beamed proudly.

Ugh!

How Ralph Edwards Protects His 'Life'

Edwards and staff: for Life, they take no chances.

He Guards Against Refusals, Lawsuits and Heart Attacks

"Supposing," the question was put to Ralph Edwards, "supposing you get this guy up there on This Is Your Life, and after it's all over he tosses a fat lawsuit at you for invasion of privacy. How are you protected?"

"That," Edwards replied, grinning, "is not even a good question."

To wit and as follows: Edwards, in 14 years with Truth or Consequences and This Is Your Life on both radio and TV, has never had so much as a nuisance suit thrown at him. Good question or not, how does he protect himself?

So far as This Is Your Life is concerned, Edwards is ahead of the game right off the bat. "Whoever heard of anybody getting mad while you're standing there saying extravagantly nice things about him?" he asks.

Lillian Roth and Ralph Edwards: he let her in on the secret before the telecast.

'SURPRISER' EDWARDS IS RARELY SURPRISED

However, Edwards is caution personified in selecting his surprise subjects for This Is Your Life. Once the selection has been made, he and his staff go to great lengths in questioning the subject's family and close friends about his possible reaction. If there seems any likelihood that the surprise appearance will be personally offensive or embarrassing, the matter is dropped at once.

Even so, Edwards is ready in the event the subject decides, at the crucial moment, that this whole idea is not for him. A stand-by kinescope of a previous show is all threaded up and ready to roll at Ralph's signal. The stand-by show used to be the Lillian Roth episode. It is now the Mary Healey show, for the Roth kinescope was aired last summer as part of the show's repeat schedule.

The Roth episode, too, is an example of Edwards' caution. Since it was the story of a former alcoholic, Edwards knew he couldn't spring it on Miss Roth as a surprise. "Her sickness," he says, "was strictly her own business. We knew it would make an inspiring show, but we wouldn't have dreamed of doing it without her permission."

The Roth show is one of only two Edwards has done thus far without the surprise element. The other was based on the life of Eddie Cantor. "Eddie's heart is not in too good shape," Edwards says, "and we certainly couldn't take the chance, however small, of shocking him into another attack. So we just told him."

While it's possible that an unknown might balk at the last minute and either refuse to go on or enter a law suit the next day, Edwards hasn't the slightest worry about one group of people: the movie stars.

"In the first place," Edwards points out, "most of them are friends of mine. In the second place, it's a publicity spread one couldn't buy for love nor money."

Eddie and Ida Cantor: no additional strain was put on the veteran comedian's heart.

But even with the so-called "unknown" subjects, Edwards thus far has been safe as a church. "These people," one of his staff points out, "are almost invariably picked because they have big hearts—they have done wonderful things for other people. They are hardly going to sue Ralph for doing something nice for them."

And if the subject faints from surprise?

"First thing we ask about," a member of the staff says, a little hurriedly, "is the subject's physical condition. If the family doctor has the slightest fear that something like that might happen, that particular show goes."

The Edwards staff, for the record, has had only one turn-down in its search for subjects, although several shows—notably those involving Ann Sheridan and Joe Louis—have had to be dropped because the subjects found out in advance. The lone turn-down is, of course, Edwards himself. Virtually everyone in Hollywood has come up, at one time or another, with the novel idea that to turn the tables on Edwards would be a magnificent switch. It would—except that Edwards has told his staff flatly he would fire every one of them if they ever tried it. He would, too.

◀ Ann Sheridan: Edwards contends she was not called because she found it all out.

Still Wanted: Talking Dog

FIGHT TO DEATH, BARE BEAUTIES ALSO STUMP 'YOU ASKED FOR IT'

Possibly the sturdiest, most dependable show in all television is You Asked for It, which came on the air back in January, 1951, and hasn't been off a single week since. Its emcee, Art Baker, who doubles on The Dinah Shore Show, has never missed a performance. Its original sponsor, Skippy Peanut Butter, is still sponsoring it.

Without doubt television's most varied variety show, it has converted its audience into an army of talent scouts. The show's boast, "If you ask for it, we'll get it," is true to the extent it only rarely misses fire. Letters averaging 3,000 a week pour into ABC's Hollywood studios with requests ranging from the not-so-difficult to the difficult-and-then-some.

According to the show's producers, Cran Chamberlin and Maury Cohen, You Asked for It is approximately 75 percent on the level. "Which is to say," they explain, "that 75 percent of the acts we put on have been asked for by a considerable number of people. We actually had nearly 10,000 requests to put on Kuda Bux, a Hindu with X-ray vision.

"The other 25 percent of the acts are so unusual and so little known that we've done them on the strength of a single request. Very, very rarely have we dug up acts we've considered good enough to put on with no requests at all. They're usually used as a last-minute filler when a scheduled act has unexpectedly conked out."

There are, of course, requests that can't be filled. Several people have asked to see a fight to the death between a man and a lion. A young boy wanted to see a parade of nude bathing beauties. And there have been many requests to witness an actual embalming, electrocution and hanging.

A legitimate request the show has never been able to fulfill has been a constantly recurring one: to see and hear a talking dog. Every one they've auditioned has proved to be a complete dud. But they're still looking.

One of the most unusual requests was linked to a TV commercial: unveiling the girls inside those dancing Old Gold packages. The ad agency, however, has been adamant in its refusal to reveal the identity of the girls. Chamberlin, an incurable optimist, still thinks he can bring it off.

The show's problems are never over, even when they're on the air. They once had a girl alligator-wrestler ready to strut her stuff, but the alligator they had picked refused to wrestle. He apparently fell in love with the girl and simply relaxed and smiled every time she tried to grapple.

Requests for a bull in a china shop have been so persistent the show has done it twice. Bits of broken china are still being uncovered on the vast ABC soundstage.

Nowadays approximately 50 percent of the show is on film. You Asked for It started out as a wholly live show, but it soon became apparent that cliff divers, racing cars, tree climbers and the like could hardly be shown to advantage within the confines of a studio. On many occasions, however, while the stunts themselves are shown on film, the people involved are brought into the studio for their chats with Baker. Skillful editing blend time elements smoothly.

The show also includes human interest items, and is particularly proud of its ability to locate lost persons. In many instances, the person sought calls the program himself.

Animals, too, in sizes from fleas to elephants, have played prominent parts on the show, although Baker prefers to skip the tiger who failed by a split second to take nasty advantage of his trainer's fall. "No one on the set," Baker recalls, "had a gun." He would also just as soon forget the two times he presented a barrel of monkeys. "One monkey," he states flatly, "is more than enough." Baker's biggest scare, however, came the time an escape artist almost didn't escape from a straitjacket under water. "We held our breaths almost as long as he held his," Baker says.

Participants on show by request included acrobat Peggy Kelly, l., who demonstrated grip of small electromagnet; The Great Togo, c., who proved ruggedness of head and neck; Melody Lady, billed as world's only bowling horse.

Believing in Flap Doodle and Bibble Board Is Buffalo Bob Smith's Business

If you think that the person who knows everything there is to know about three-to-eight-year-olds is Hans Christian Andersen or Danny Kaye, you're a square and a dunderhead. Only one person is that smart: Bob Smith—Buffalo Bob, naturally—of Doodyville.

Buffalo Bob is a believer. For almost seven long years on TV, five afternoons a week, he has been actively engaged in believing. Through this remarkable and strenuous occupation, Buffalo Bob has reached this conclusion: the nonbelievers—the most vehement of whom are age nine and 10 but who go on up to 90 and 100—are in a deplorable state. They are unequivocally unqualified to be friends or boosters of Howdy Doody.

Just suppose you are a believer. You immediately fall heir to the Flap Doodle, a handy improvement on the worn-out jinni of Aladdin's day, that gets you anything you want. No hanky-panky with rubbing, either. The Flap Doodle works.

Then there's the Electro-Mind-O-Mizer which reads people's minds. Every four-year-old from Caracas to the outlying districts of Bordeaux is hep to its principle—the cathode antihistamine tube, a most convenient device to have around for cut-up friends.

Conceivably, you might want to take a trip to the moon or deepest Africa. But you also want to let people at home know all is hunky-dory. Use the Super-Talkascope, of course.

Any question you want answered? Write it down on the Bibble Board, mash it up well, feed it to the Question Quasher Squasher and your answer comes out on a large ticker tape.

Now, no one has suggested yet that you turn believer; but if you happen to be a convert, the world does take on an iridescent glow. Many people upwards of eight (the crisis year) view the large-scale, grown-up Buffalo Bob with condescension and visible paleness. His own offspring, age 10 and 12, are among these.

Buffalo Bob, who likes three-year-olds, has a ready defense. "Maybe we are silly at times, but we're entertainers. And have you ever watched a three-year-old play?"

As a practically unheard-of disc jockey from Buffalo, N.Y., before Howdy Doody, Buffalo Bob Smith has a number of heart-warming reasons to like his role of confidant and buddy to the milk-and-jam league. They are: fame, an international following, a solid status and a secure future. Producer Roger Muir says, "We're looking forward to Howdy Doody 10 years from now."

Both Muir and Buffalo Bob feel Howdy Doody is a sort of service program. "The best thing that hit this country since the dollar-an-hour baby sitter," Bob explains proudly.

"And we're working on a fall safety campaign with the American Automobile Association. Our slogan is 'You don't cross the street with your feet but with your eyes.'"

After two years in The Club House, the show recently moved to a circus. Muir feels this will create new interests, introduce new puppets, and revive old ones like the Flub-A-Dub.

Buffalo Bob is looking at it as a way to spend some time with his own children, in Larchmont, N. Y., who are more interested in baseball than puppets. "It's illogical, from the kids' point of view, for me to take a vacation. Since the show is on all year, the only way I get away is to pretend to help the show by taking a trip.

"The last vacation I had, I was supposed to be looking for a platinum platypus. Every kid knows how rare that is. It took me a couple of weeks to find one."

The out-of-studio antics of Buffalo Bob are filmed in advance and the NBC show continues uninterrupted. But Buffalo Bob manages to communicate every now and then—through the Super-Talkascope, naturally.

Pucker and pate: Alix Talton busses Bob Sweeney, her My Favorite Husband husband.

Georgia Peach On TV

Every once in a while, life counterfeits soap opera. Example: Alix Talton was told she'd never walk again.

Miss Talton, who still has traces of a once-thick Georgia accent, plays Bob Sweeney's wife on My Favorite Husband. As Myra Cobb, she is a rather brassy individual, loaded with gold. Off camera, she is warmer, prettier and not quite so loaded.

Married to George Cahan, who directs My Friend Irma, Alix got her start as "Miss Atlanta" back in—well, back there somewhere; and later went on to the "Miss America" contest as "Miss Georgia." Next stop: New York, as a Powers model.

After a year of modeling, she signed on as a chorus girl in the "American Jubilee" show at the New York World's Fair; the following year found her dancing in a Miami night club.

Miss Talton came to Hollywood just before the Second World War, determined to be an actress. Which she now is. Her career was interrupted five years ago by a fall from a horse. It broke her back. Told she would never walk again, she was out of bed three weeks later. Three months later she was walking, and pretty well, too. She is still on the athletic side, swimming almost every day. But she shuns horses.

Chicago Dateline

TV's Week: Don McNeill's anniversary party Wednesday (celebrating his 21 years in radio) proved just how far TV association can get you. Counselor Ray Jenkins of Army-McCarthy hearing fame was flown to Chicago to be star guest on McNeill's Breakfast Club, in a purely non-official capacity. Didn't even ask Don for any monitored phone calls.

New recruits for WGN-TV's musical combo, The Star-noters, are George Ryan, Don Kruswick, Nick Aden and Reno Tondelli. The former members are now in Florida.

Chapel

A quick thumbnail sketch of WBBM-TV's new weatherman, P. J. Hoff, who appears on Fahey Flynn's newscasts, weekdays at 10 P.M. He's from the St. Paul-Minneapolis area where he served as newspaper columnist and cartoonist for 30 years. Started as a TV weatherman about five years ago. Young lady who assists him is his daughter, Virginia. She'll handle background details.

Advance Tips on Shows: A new combination, Mal Bellairs and Bette Chapel, has been inked to replace Howard Miller and June Valli on WNBQ's Close-Up during the latters' vacation, July 2 to Sept. 10. Replacement for Howard's Friday night show is up to the sponsor. Rumor has it that it'll be another golfing session ala the Tuesday night vehicle.

WNBQ's long-heralded Out On The Farm bows on July 11 in the 4 P.M. period. Regulars include Eddy Arnold, Clint Youle, Don Herbert, John Ott and the Landmeier family, whose farm provides the setting.

WBKB brings back the My Hero series July 10 in the Saturday night at 9 time slot. Robert Cummings stars.

Don't look for Bob and Ray in WBKB's late afternoon lineup after July 2. New York has once more canceled them from the network.

Ray Bolger bows in the 7:30 P.M. Friday period July 2 on WBKB while the show currently occupying that spot, Playhouse, moves to the 6:30 P.M. time on July 4. This move erases newscasters Drew Pearson and Austin Kiplinger from Channel 7's Sunday lineup.

how uncle win

Family orchestra includes Win on the guitar, Jane with the auto-harp (a gift of Dave Garroway) and Barbara at the piano.

IT HAPPENED all over Chicago recently. An armed rebellion that would have dumfounded Captain Bly's mutineers. Yet, it was accomplished without guns, arms or ammunition. This was a psychological rebellion conducted by the moms-and-moppets of Chicagoland in behalf of a video uncle, as real to them as their personal Uncles Joe or Sam.

It all began a few months ago when Uncle Win Stracke was "blacked out" on TV screens in the area. After slightly more than a year of faithful service on WNBQ, Uncle Win announced in a sorrowful little speech that he was being replaced on Channel 5 by a new show aimed for women, the network's Home.

Then, guitar slung over his shoulder, he bade adieu to his animals—Perky the Rooster, Penny the dog, Ruthie the duck, and Tillie the rabbit. And a flood-dam of tears broke as junior-league Chicagoans sobbed into their milk.

For those who had missed his farewell show, the next few days were unbearable. Busy housewives took time out from their chores to pacify the babes who couldn't understand why "no more Uncle Win?" The pre-school branch of the population was inconsolable.

Thus, it came as no shock when WNBQ, TV GUIDE, newspapers and Win, himself, were besieged with phone calls, letters and even telegrams, demanding (not merely inquiring) to know the reason for Channel 5's appalling action. Not since Godfrey fired La-Rosa has so much public attention been heaped on any TV personality.

Uncle Win, you see, was a humble figure, although a giant in physical proportions. And, in the minds of the public, WNBQ was Jack, the Giant Killer.

Immediately after the action had been announced, the women and children instigated a non-integrated but intense action of their own. PTA groups circulated petitions. (Two girls alone passed out over 700.) Mothers wrote letters by the bushelsful. The only thing they didn't do was picket WNBQ.

The Mail Came . . . And Came.

The letters came with pounding regularity. They were humorous: ". . . I am expecting another baby soon and there will most likely be quite a few more, and I want all of them to be able to see your TV program." "I prayed to St. Francis of Assisi for Win Stracke to come back again, for the saint was also a lover of animals who were his little friends." "Of course, now we can see Garry Moore again. Please, next time you come on, try not to conflict with mamma's program."

There was even one from a cat named Cutsie: "I am six years old, strictly the indoors-type. Except for meals, I sleep most of the day. But one thing I always waited for was Animal Playtime. Now you don't show up at all. I just don't understand it . . . the only program I really watched without falling asleep."

came back

Uncle Win and Penny

Some letter-writers were fighting mad: ". . . children are not changed as easily as television knobs." "Shame on you whose God is that folding green stuff!" "Surely the greed of commercialization cannot deprive our children of something as fine as your show."

Some offered suggestions: "If commercial sponsorship proves too difficult to hurdle, how about considering some kind of parent sponsorship? I, for one, would be more than glad to share the financial responsibility for the program."

Many letters were moving, pathetically sincere. "We had to buy our daughter two goldfish after Uncle Win went away. She thinks they're his and she is taking care of them." "Our four-year-old prayed for him last night." "My daughter cried as if a close one had died."

To the phone call-letter-telegram barrage were added some personal words of comfort. A neighbor assured Mrs. Stracke confidentially she had it on good authority (from an "unimpeachable source") that Win would be back by fall. He beat that prediction by four months.

How did he accomplish this? While all the grass-roots commotion was brewing, WBKB, whose executives still keep an ear tuned to public reaction, observed the rebellion from a grandstand seat. At the proper psychological moment, they signed Uncle Win to a contract and thus proclaimed Channel 7's conquest of another TV favorite.

Who deserves credit for the Stracke return is not important. The main thing is, Chicago's TV circle once more has its WIN-ner. And, Win's army can rejoice.

Time For Uncle Win is now seen at 3:30 PM, Mon. through Fri. on WBKB.

A favorite audience—the kindergarten class of LaSalle school joins Uncle Win for a chorus.

Even Godfrey Vacations

Will Arthur Godfrey's Wednesday evening show continue during the summer? If not, will it be back in the fall? — Norma Setlak, Eau Claire, Mich. (While Godfrey vacations, Red Skelton's Vaudeville Show will take over. Godfrey will return in the fall.—Ed.)

Skelton

Those Gleason Girls

Would you please straighten out a friendly family argument concerning the Jackie Gleason Show? I claim that the girl who introduces the Gleason show and says, "And away we go" is not the same girl that Jackie has always used. My husband disagrees and says that it is the same girl. Who's right?—Mrs. E. L. Marsh, McHenry, Ill. (You are. Jackie first used Theone Bryant and is currently introduced by Bette Ellen.—Ed.)

Sponsors, Please Note

There was a time when kind sponsors gave us foreign language films with superimposed English sub-titles. These were greatly appreciated and thoroughly enjoyed by thousands of Chicago's deaf TV set owners and viewers. Is there some way that films with sub-titles can be brought back to TV?—Leonard Warshawsky, President, Illinois Association of the Deaf. (Sponsors select the films that they present. Maybe if you wrote to film sponsors they would present more movies with sub-titles on TV.—Ed.)

For the Betterment of TV?

Suggestion: TV panelists should be shoveled six feet under. Spare those who appear on What's My Line, however. Those ancient cowboy films should be fed to the program director who schedules them. What do I like? Arthur Godfrey, Loretta Young, Betty White, Liberace and Garry Moore. 'Nuff said? —Mrs. R. V. Regnier, Cedar Lake, Ind.

In Appreciation

I would like to write to express my appreciation for the continuation of the Voice of Firestone. To whom should I address my letter?—Joan Kalman, Chicago, Ill. (Letters regarding the Voice of Firestone should be addressed to Harvey Firestone, Jr., 1200 Firestone Pkwy., Akron, Ohio.—Ed.)

One Woman's Opinion

I must say that TV shows are getting boring. This Is Your Life and Your Hit Parade are the ones that bore me most. Of course, there are many other shows that should be ousted. Among these are The Comedy Hour and Milton Berle. These shows are absolutely ridiculous. —Judy Lasky, Winnetka, Ill.

Knock! Knock! Who's There?

The other night I watched a very fine play on Ford Theatre. I do not remember the name of the play but I know it starred Fay Bainter. Would you please tell me the name of the play and the name of the girl who co-starred with Miss Bainter? I think it was Diana Lynn but my sister says it was not.—Nancy Smith, Chicago, Ill. (Diana Lynn was the girl who co-starred with Fay Bainter. The play was "The Unlocked Door."—Ed.)

Lynn

⑦ BOXING—Eastern Parkway

Walter Cartier vs. Tuzo "Kid" Portugez, middleweights, 10 rounds. Fred Sayles and Tommy Loughran report.

TV GUIDE RATINGS

	Rated	Bouts	W	L	D	KO's
Cartier	unrated	55	43	11	1	23
Portugez	unrated	72	50	16	6	26

Both of these men cut easily and if the bout develops into a slugfest the commission doctor should be making frequent visits to both corners. Tuzo is a two-fister mauler while Cartier is a clever boxer who has turned slugger. Cartier needs a win in this one.

Compiled by Nat Fleischer (The Ring)

⑨ SPORTSMAN'S CLUB

9:00 ② SUMMER THEATER

"Screwball," by Mel Goldberg. A not-too-young garage mechanic dreams of becoming a big-league pitcher.

Marge Adams ..... Sally Gracie
Mrs. Adams ..... Leora Thatcher
Frank Frisch ..... Himself

⑨ BOXING—New York City

Cisco Andrade, lightweight, vs. Johnny DiGilio, welterweight, 10 rounds. Chris Schenkel reports from St. Nicholas Arena.

TV GUIDE RATINGS

	Rated	Bouts	W	L	D	KO's
Andrade	8	24	23	0	1	13
DiGilio	unrated	27	23	4	0	8

Andrade is a classy boxer who figures to have too much speed for the rough DiGilio. However DiGilio holds a win over Freddy Herman, who held "The Cisco Kid" (Andrade) to a draw. The bout should be an exhibition of Andrade's skill vs. DiGilio's slamming style.

Big-Hearted Blonde

Believe It Or Not, Her Friendly Irma Isn't Just An Act

Marie Wilson—Irma Peterson on My Friend Irma, which calls it a season this week—is something of a 20th Century phenomenon. Without any visible effort, she has parlayed a glassy-eyed stare and a stare-inducing figure into a minor national institution.

From 1942 to 1949, she stood briefly onstage at Los Angeles' El Capitan Theater six nights a week in Ken Murray's "Blackouts." All she did was stand there and let

. . . BUT FEW PEOPLE KNOW MARIE WILSON WELL

Murray bounce a few lines off her, and the customers kept coming back for seven straight years. When Murray took the show to Broadway, he made the mistake of leaving Marie behind. The show folded in two weeks.

Although Miss Wilson's generous natural endowments inspire much speculation, another and more complex query invariably is raised from the floor. Is Miss Wilson as dumb as she looks? It is not a question you generally ask a lady, but it is a question which can be answered. By the lady.

Take the instance of the benefit in Phoenix. CBS phoned her and said, "Marie, will you go to Phoenix next week to do a benefit?" Marie said no, she wouldn't, except on her own terms. The terms: every minute of the time she was to spend in Phoenix had to be scheduled. "Why," she asked, with wide-eyed simplicity, "should I go all the way to Phoenix just to stand up there on a stage for half an hour and look dumb?"

The fact of the matter is simply that Marie has a heart as big as—well, she has a big heart. She is constantly worrying about someone, generally the last person she has seen, and is constantly offering help. If a stagehand sneezes, Marie rushes off to get her purse. In it are a variety of pills, one of which is soon in the stagehand. If she is ill herself, she worries about the people taking care of her.

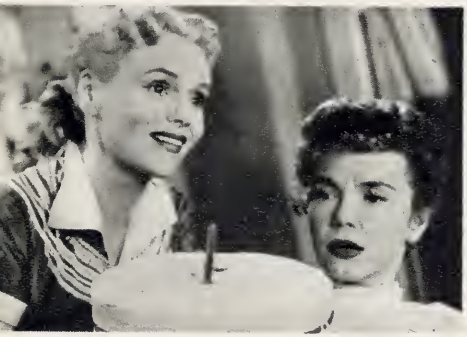
Several years ago she woke up in the middle of the night, deathly ill. Although she didn't know it at the moment, she was in the grip of a massive blood clot and death was sitting virtually on the doorstep. Not until the next morning, however, did she call a doctor. Why? "He's a very busy man and he needs his sleep."

On such subjects, Marie has a mind with all the pliability of a length of cast-iron pipe. Once she has formed a basic opinion, that's it. She currently has two conflicting fixations: (1) a convertible is the fashion in cars, and (2) she must never let her face be exposed to the sun. So she owns a beautiful convertible whose top has not been down since the day the factory gave it its last test.

Quite possibly there is no more sympathetic person in Hollywood than Marie, yet she is extremely difficult to know well. "Nobody knows her," a CBS associate says flatly. "There's an invisible wall around this girl, and nobody gets through it."

A Hollywood columnist puts it this way: "When you run into Marie for perhaps the third time, she gives you the distinct impression that you are old, old friends. She prescribes for all your family's ills; she offers her help on any problem you may have—and she means every last word of it. Yet when she has left, you suddenly realize you don't know this girl at all."

Marie's inability to come across to people lies chiefly in her inability to translate her almost childlike wisdom into adult logic. She is an extremely wise person when it comes to fundamentals, yet almost wholly incapable of coping with everyday problems.



Mary Shipp, r., this season had role of Irma's long-suffering roommate.

Marie was born Katherine Elizabeth Wilson, in Anaheim, Calif. Her father died when she was five years old, leaving her a legacy of $11,000, to be turned over at her mother's discretion. This happened when Marie was barely 16. Staking everything on the hope of getting in the movies, Marie moved her family of seven to Hollywood. In 1937 she had a screen test at M-G-M.

Between bit parts she clerked in a department store. It was bad enough that she gave away toys to people who couldn't afford them; but when she talked a customer out of buying a $25 teddy bear, they fired her. "I just didn't think the poor man really wanted it," she still maintains.

From 1937 to 1942 she played in a number of unspectacular pictures. Then Ken Murray signed her for his "Blackouts" at $250 a week. Exactly 2,332 consecutive performances later, by which time she was making $1,000 a week, she decided enough was enough.

When Cy Howard, the creator of My Friend Irma, first offered her the title role, she turned it down—not because she didn't want it but because she felt she wasn't right for it. "I'd only spoil it for you," she said.

Marie lives in what she calls a "medium" home in the Hollywood Hills with her husband, TV packager Bob Fallon. The place is done almost entirely in pink, her favorite color. Even the dog, a Yorkshire terrier named Hobbs, sports a pink ribbon on his collar.

Hollywood's favorite, perhaps most revealing, story about Marie Wilson has to do with her answer to a reporter's rather blunt question.

"Are you really dumb?" he asked.

"Naturally," she replied. "Do you want me to lose my job?"

She will not accept the fact, for instance, that the majority of street beggars are fakes. Approached by one with the usual "I'm down and out" story recently, she poured both money and tears into his outstretched hand. The following week she was approached by the same man at the same spot. "What a foolish little man you are," she said. "Gee, I'm not that dumb. Why don't you go to work like I do?" When she learns a lesson, she learns it.

Is Seeing

Hocus-Pocus Adds Glamor To

A television studio is not a home. This the advertising agency boys have learned the hard way. Long hours of rehearsal under hot lights not only wear down actors, but also the food and other products displayed during commercials. An actor can always dab on some make-up—but what do you do with a dish of frozen dessert?

What you see on your screen is a product that appears to be just as it is in your kitchen or on your dressing table. But what goes before the cameras, able to withstand the lights and the hours of manhandling in cramped quarters, may be something entirely different.

The idea isn't to defraud the viewer, but to solve a troublesome technical problem. There have been some mighty ingenious solutions.

During a recent New York telecast, a newly hired stagehand looked at the chocolate pudding shown in the commercial and started to drool. Appetizingly dark and smoothly textured, it was crowned with a mound of thick whipped cream. Um-m-m, de-licious! When the program ended, the stagehand scooped up a huge spoonful and shoveled it into his mouth. Which was a mistake. The "whipped cream" was shaving soap—the kind you squirt easily from a pressurized container.

Specifically, it was the brand most preferred by the men who stage commercials for television. Its consistency and resistance to the heat generated by studio lights make the brand perfect for luscious cake "icing," luxuriously foamy "shampoo," and long-lasting "suds" bubbling from soaps, detergents and washing powders.

A stagehand more experienced in foods shown in commercials might eat "ice cream" if he liked cheddar cheese. Cheddar—or cream cheese, if you pick vanilla—makes picture-perfect dips of ice cream that won't melt.

The men who make commercials claim to use substitutes and gimmicks only when telegenically necessary. They use real corn flakes, for instance—but flakes sprayed with lacquer to prevent their being wilted by milk into soggy glop while an announcer extols their crispness.

Often the foods displayed in commercials are used in double or more the amounts prescribed for home preparation. A double amount of ready-mixed flour bakes into better looking layer cakes. Gelatin desserts would melt into soupy fluids under studio lights without triple or quadruple the customary quantities used. Then—to quote a production man—"you can bounce them off the floor."

There's chicken in every TV potpie because special pies with extra chunks of chicken are baked for frozen potpie commercials.

Putting on the dog food commercials is a meaty problem. One agency

Believing?

Products in TV Commercials

mixes steak gravy with the product before pointing a hungry dog at it. Another rubs raw hamburger on Rover's dish.

One lipstick supposedly impervious to osculation "isn't good, photographically," an agency man explained. "You have to use theatrical lipstick, which is greasy, to have your model look pretty. Well, when we had the account, we gave the model a red-tinted cup to drink from and the camera couldn't pick up red-on-red."

To show the durability of nail polish, the model begins coating the nails of one hand several days ahead. Just before the telecast, polish is applied to the nails of the other hand. Remover easily wipes off the single fresh coat and has little visual effect on the multi-coated nails.

The things they get in their hair annoy models for shampoo commercials. For one, the model's hair is parted in the middle and one side is shampooed with the sponsor's product while the other is washed with Product X. The sponsor's half is actually shampooed and set at a beauty parlor. Powder, dirt and other dulling matter is dusted on the X side.

On film, hair sequences are shot backwards. Expert coiffeurs set the hair and the result is photographed with extra spotlights beamed at the coif to highlight it. Then the model shampoos or curls her hair for the camera, but the viewer is shown the first operation last.

A cleanser supposed to clean woodwork with one wipe did so on a commercial because a door was soiled with vegetable dye and the rag saturated with cleanser was also loaded with bleach. Floors are "dirtied" with poster paint, easily wiped off.

That leaf of tobacco dangled on a commercial won't smoke aromatically, unless you savor the flavor of burning rubber. A real leaf of cured tobacco couldn't take that handling. The wide swath mowed through a heavy beard by a sponsor's razor is pre-cut and camouflaged.

Each agency has its own way of staging commercials. Take the case of beer. Bottles are opened, then lightly recapped so that the announcer won't have to struggle and maybe shake up the brew. One agency man said he discovered that beer at 52° will pour perfectly. Another agency prefers to use warm beer. For close-ups, to show carbonation action, ginger ale may be substituted. Announcers on salt-free diets can't drink the beers with less sugar content if there's a close-up: a pinch of salt is used to produce the right rise.

All this is done, understandably, to dramatize a product's good points so viewers will try it. After that, the proof of the pudding is in the eating —with real whipped cream, of course.

Mr. D.A. Takes The Stand

David Brian Sticks To His Story As He Talks And Talks And Talks

One of the many gimmicks employed by high-powered Hollywood press agents in bringing their clients to the direct and personal attention of out-of-town newspaper editors is a gadget known as the telephone. The press agent arranges in advance for the movie or television editors of five or six big-city papers to be at their desks at a given time, whereupon the star involved sits down at a Hollywood desk and gets them on the phone, one by one.

On a recent Hollywood afternoon, David Brian, star of the Mr. District Attorney television film series, was given his introduction to this enterprising bit of press-agentry.

"I remember," he said idly, waiting for the first call to go through, "sitting in the office of another press agent some years ago. I was making my first big picture. This press agent had five or six others working for him and we all sat around a big table and they asked me questions. I noticed a framed motto on the wall, which said, 'Consistency is the trademark of the small mind.' And those people were asking me some of the most consistently routine questions I have ever answered and which I have been answering ever since."

The first call was put through. "Why, yes," Brian said into the phone, "I do enjoy working in TV . . . Yes, I find the pace a little faster than in pictures . . . Oh, no, it's a lot of fun. I find it very exciting . . . Yes, my wife is a very good cook. Yes, indeed . . . No, wardrobe is no real problem . . . Yes, I'll certainly look you up next time I'm in town. Thank you."

He hung up. As the session wore on it revealed that Brian has been addicted to Brooks Brothers suits since he was 15, that he is too big and can't wear ready-made clothes, that he hates fittings and that he feels the Mr. District Attorney series is all-around family entertainment. After all, what else could he say?

Well into the third telephone interview it became apparent that Brian was being asked the same questions. His skill at answering them five times and making each of the five answers sound like an ad lib, spoke well of his 20 years as an actor.

When the ordeal was over, he had accomplished very little and accomplished it very well. There are few things more unsatisfactory than a telephone interview with a complete stranger.

What wasn't made clear during any of the interviews, of course, is the fact that Brian, a highly capable actor, was doing this stint on his own time and was, in fact, paying for the privilege. Next to seeing his name in print, an actor likes most in this world to see his name in print.

Nor is this purely an expression of the thespian ego. Current American folklore to the contrary, very few actors are under term contracts to a studio—and of those who are, even fewer last out the full "seven year deal" which looks so important in print but which also has annual renewal options. Actors, in short, are forever on the prowl for work. If they can keep their names in print, chances of getting it are much better.

An actor like Brian, set for the time being with a firm contract for 39 films, is even more interested in publicity. Good publicity can help enormously in attracting customers to the TV set. The more people who see Mr. District Attorney, the higher the show's rating. The higher the rating, the better the job the star presumably is doing. The better the job he does in his current assignment, the better his chances for another job when this one is over.

Before cameras: As Mr. D.A., he directs pointed questions to Vici Raff.

Janet Dean, Registered Nurse

Ella Raines: as Janet Dean, she finds herself busy with Freudian matters.

This new film series, made in New York and starring one of Hollywood's medium-sized names for viewer bait, has been made with the commendable purpose of (1) selling the nursing profession, and (2) pointing out that many illnesses actually spring from the mind and are psychosomatic—or traceable to the mind.

The result, unfortunately, is a little heavy-handed. What this show needs, rather desperately, is at least one good laugh per episode.

Ella Raines, as Janet Dean, Registered Nurse, apparently spends a good deal of her time on private cases. Not content with the usual temperature, pulse and back-rub routine, she investigates the psychological factors which lie hidden behind most of her cases and promptly goes to work laying out a campaign of applied pyschology—with or without the doctor's approval or help.

In one story she makes a doting mother see the light in time to save her little boy from becoming a young hypochondriac. In another, a doting mother is unmasked as a selfish old woman who doesn't want her big boy to get married. In a third, catering in a moment of weakness to the TV taste of the times, she messes up a diabolical plot to murder a little girl so that a little boy (and his diabolical mother) can inherit all the money.

Miss Raines, who has wrestled with the movies over quite a long period, is both attractive and competent. She is particularly appealing in the earlier scenes of each episode while she is still busy being a nurse and has not yet gotten around to the more Freudian aspects of the case. In her dramatic scenes, however, she tends to be a little wooden. Some healthy venom, especially when you're on the right side of justice, is what it takes to make the crowd roar.

The production of the series is well done in the hands of a highly professional staff.

Inner Sanctum

Inner Sanctum, which gets its title and little else from the radio show of the same name, is a better-than-average whodunit with only occasional undertones of the kind of psychological horror that made its counterpart one of the more interesting landmarks of radio history.

Like most such shows, its scripts seem uniformly routine. Its episodes thus stand or fall on performance and direction, a department in which the show bats an approximate .500.

Given such actors as Paul Stewart and Jack Warden, both professionals of considerable versatility, Inner Sanctum can turn out as neat a bit of suspense as any entry on the market, even though the surprise denouement is hardly a surprise to the case-hardened viewer after the first five minutes. Stewart's performance, in particular, carried a recent such story almost single-handedly.

However, the show's live New York flavor puts it a notch or two above the routine Hollywood half-hour film. It may be a disappointment to the radio listener of old, but to the newcomer it stacks up better than most.

FINE TUNING

By OLLIE CRAWFORD

Las Vegas using TV to catch gambling cheats. It's like a new panel show—What's My Point?

This is about the only TV set that gets Little Joe instead of Joe McCarthy.

The boss can sit in his office and watch all the gambling tables while figuring out his income tax. He can see snake-eyes staring at him without watching Zoo Parade. This could be like the Hit Parade show, where they pick the seven best "sevens."

One guy was so lucky he practically had his own Strike It Rich program.

His dice were so loaded, they were practically stinko. He was so crooked he could roll "seven" with one die. There haven't been so many passes on TV since the last French movie. He kept winning even when they gave him round dice.

He was doing better on TV with the ivories than Liberace.

From now on, he has to make "four" the hard way—with somebody watching.
